

41. Difficulty making plans

It can be very difficult to make plans for the future when confronted with the diagnosis of cancer. Those plans already in place may have had to be altered due to the number of hospital appointments, the severity of the symptoms, or treatment side effects. Making future plans can be difficult enough but there may be other people to consider, and other uncertainties, which can make this even harder. Some people develop a fear of 'tempting fate'; in other words, they fear making any kind of assumptions about their future (e.g. "If I make a plan for next summer, something is bound to go wrong. It's safer not to plan anything").

However, it is essential to everyone's wellbeing that they have joyful things in the future to look forward to, and things to work towards and achieve. Without such plans we can quickly lose a sense of motivation in our lives, and our mood will consequently deteriorate into depression and hopelessness. Furthermore, if we stop being actively involved in the world around us we can quickly lose confidence in ourselves (for example, if you don't leave the house much it can seem a bit scary when you do; if you don't see your friends much you can imagine they wouldn't want to see you, etc.).

How can I manage these feelings?

- The first step is to fully acknowledge the feelings you are having. Sometimes people try to dismiss these feelings, fight them or become caught up in them. So rather than beat yourself up for having these feelings work towards accepting that many people do and they are understandable in the circumstances (your life may well have been turned upside down since your diagnosis). Once you have been able to acknowledge your feelings, you can think about making a wise response in relation to them.
- Even though it may be hard, try to think about your future. It may not be the future you would have wished for yourself, and it may even feel hard to predict, but having things to look forward to and things to achieve is a big part of what makes life worth living.
- Sometimes the experience of cancer helps people decide on new priorities for their lives. This may mean spending more time with your family, going on that holiday you have long dreamed about, or taking up a new hobby. Just thinking about these things and making plans can help remind you that you still know how to make choices. Remember that it will help if you can make plans for when active treatment is finished.
- Think about short term plans that you could make: things to achieve or work towards (e.g. "I will plan to build up my daily walks from 10 minutes a day to 20 minutes"; "By this weekend I will contact two of the friends I have not spoken to in months").
- Make sure your goals are specific (you know exactly what needs to be done), achievable (it is something you are likely to succeed in doing), measurable (you know when you have achieved it and can therefore “tick it off”) and time-limited (you agree to achieve the goal by a certain time).

41. Difficulty making plans

- Having short term plans can help regain a sense of control in an otherwise uncontrollable situation; planning for the day ahead ensures that by the evening you will have the satisfying feeling that that you have achieved something with the day.
- Some people find that planning for every possible future that they can imagine eventually helps them feel in control because whatever the future holds they have a plan up their sleeve.
- It can be useful to speak with your family or friends so they can help you make realistic plans for both the short term and long term.
- It may help you to simply explore your options with a non-judgemental person such as a professional or spiritual leader who is not emotionally involved in the situation.

Living With and Beyond Cancer Information Sheet

41. Difficulty Making Plans - Resources/Information

Local Resources:

Cancer Care Counselling Service The Fern Centre North Devon District Hospital Raleigh park Barnstaple Devon EX32 4JB	Jess French, Lead Macmillan Cancer Care Counsellor Tel: 01271 334472 (ext. 5672) Email: jess.french@nhs.net Web: https://overandabove.org.uk/fern-centre/ Self referral or though your CNS or keyworker
---	--

National Resources:

NHS 111	Offers medical help and advice from fully trained advisers supported by experienced nurses and paramedics. Available over the phone 24 hours a day.
NHS Website	Online information and guidance on all aspects of health and healthcare, to help you take control of your health and wellbeing.
Macmillan Cancer Support Line www.macmillan.org.uk Call 0808 808 00 00 — Monday – Friday 9am—8pm	Calls are free of charge from all consumer landlines and mobile phones plus all mobile networks. Please note that calls to this number are not free when made from outside the UK. If you are calling from outside of the UK call on +44 207 091 2230
Macmillan on-line Community	Online support— to share experiences or vent your emotions find others who understand—join today!
Marie Curie Support Line — Living with a terminal illness and looking for support www.mariecurie.org.uk/help/support/marie-curie-support	Calls are free of charge from all consumer landlines and mobile phones plus all mobile networks. The Support Line is open 8am – 6pm Monday to Friday and 11am – 5pm Saturday

Other Resources :

Macmillan Booklets:	Cancer and complementary therapies PDF— MAC11645
	Managing the symptoms of cancer MAC11671
	How are you feeling? PDF— MAC11593_E05_N
	Understanding chemotherapy MAC11619_E15
	Understanding radiotherapy PDF— MAC11640_E12_N